Gene Wilder and Gilda's cancer psychotherapist, Joanna Bull, established the first Gilda's Club in 1991 in New York City.

This was Gilda's wish that a place could be established where people of all ages diagnosed with cancer could come together and support one another through the illness. The centers are non-medical and very homey, with an art center, comfortable meeting rooms, an exercise area, a kitchen, a game room and a children's room called Noogieland.

Gilda's Club currently has centers all over the United States and Canada.
